EXCLUSIVE: Brothers make millions using webcam girls to sell 'sob' stories to desperate men

Callous Tristan and Andrew Tate run a studio where punters hand over thousands believing they are in relationships with the girls and admit it's 'all a scam' but authorities cannot stop them

By Emer Scully, News Reporter

21:13, 19 Mar 2022 | UPDATED 13:22, 29 Jun 2022

Two brothers are raking in millions from webcam sites where men hand over a fortune as they fall for models' fake sob stories.

Callous Tristan and Andrew Tate admit their business is a "total scam" but say the authorities cannot stop them. They claim to run a studio where 75 lingerie-clad models take calls from fans paying $4 a minute.

Punters can ask for private shows and pay tips "at their own risk".

Tristan says one man handed over his £20,000 inheritance, while others have run up huge debts. And the kickboxing brothers – raised on a council estate – sit back and watch the money roll in.

Tristan, 33, and Andrew, 35, own 22 cars including a Bugatti, a Rolls-Royce, a Ferrari, two Lamborghinis and a £650,000 Aston Martin Valhalla on order.

Andrew Tate, dismissive tweetstorm from American-British kickboxer Andrew Tate, magnified over the course of the weekend, has opened the floodgates to a social media debate about depression, its root causes and the casual harm done by those who deny it's a serious illness.

The 30-year-old fighter, by no means a mental health professional, fired off a tweet effectively minimizing depression as a lazy decision not to exert effort toward positive life change. September is Suicide Prevention Awareness Month.

It is a circumstance which they must change. Most "depressed" people are unhappy with their lives, not say to change it. That simple.
